St. Andrews, a small and newly established liberal arts college, oficially opened its doors on September 22, 1961. From its beginnings, St. Andrews possessed and possesses today, a unique belief in a broad learning experience both academic and social. Symbolic of this attitude towards liberal learning was the knight who personified strength, duty, and faith which was the aim of the college. Over the twenty year period since St. Andrews was established, these beliefs in the complete educational experience have been developed in many ways but the fine traditions of this institution that were embraced in 1961 still hold true today . . . Times bring change but "some changes are for good."

Didn't you ever want to climb the highest mountain you could find.
Didn't you ever want to do it all.
Didn't you ever want to do it all.

Long ago I heard a voice, telling me I had no choice. Take a chance cause even if you fall . . . at least you know you tried to do it all.

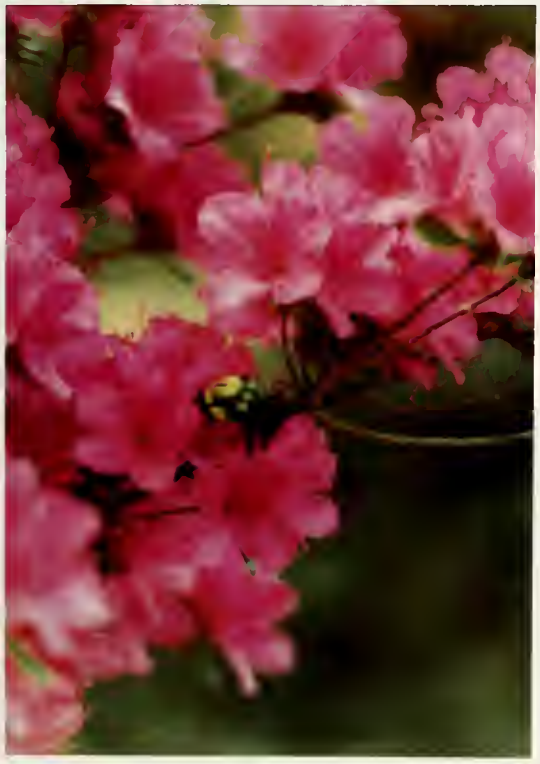
Some changes are for good and this I know for sure.

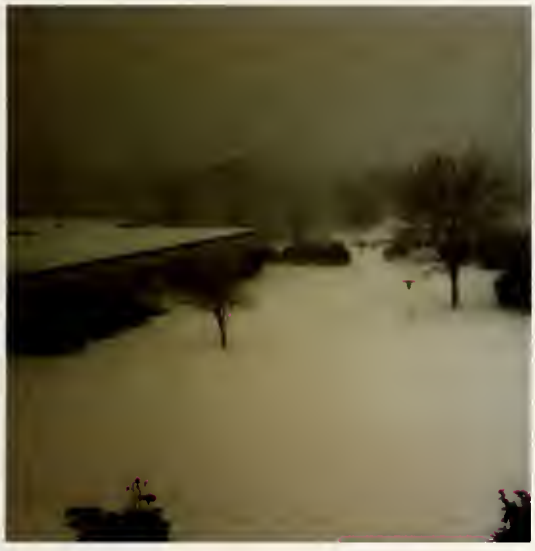
Some things in life are meant to be,
Some changes set you free.

And free means I can fly and sometimes say goodbye.
I wouldn't hold on if I could, some changes are good.

Didn't you ever want to feel just the part of life that's real. After all we're dealing with the truth here. Isn't it the truth we're going for.

And if somewhere along the line your dreams are lying close to mine Maybe you and I can have it all. Maybe you and I can have it all.





Some changes are for good and this I know for sure.
Somethings in life are meant to be,
Some changes set you free.

And free means I can fly and sometimes say goodbye.
I wouldn't hold on if I could,

. . . Some changes are for good.

Dedication

In an age where people come and go it is hard to believe sometimes that there are people who stay around a place for a while. A college is one place that seems to always have changes every year and St. Andrews is no exception. At the same time St. Andrews is lucky to have seven faculty members to have remained for twenty to thirty-three years. These people are: Dr. Alexander — Philosophy and Religion with twenty years of service; Dr. Harvin — History and Politics with twenty-one years; Dr. Bennett — English with twenty-two years; Dr. Neylans — Foreign Language with twenty-three years; Dr. Daughtrey — Education and Psychology with twenty-five years; Dr. Decker — Director of Rehabilitation with twenty-nine years; and Dr. Bullock — Religion with thirty-three years.

These seven have gone through the changes of the college itself, the students, with themselves and have remained dedicated to their work and the students through it all. With this we would like to dedicate the 1981-82 Lamp and Shield to these seven and to the 1982 Senior Class.

Fine Arts

Change has always been our middle name — perhaps its the climate. However, Anne Woodson and James Linehan aren't getting older, they're getting better. The Art program is now offering the Art major a balanced program in basic studio courses and Art History classes.

"My darling, we are clay and at the dizzy center of our life. The finest fabric's clod until the potter sets his hand to shape it. So we shape our lives by touch and burning."

Dr. W.D. White's national honor from the National Endowment for the Humanities took him to the University of Indiana to study biomedical ethics for the 1981-82 academic year. Joining the staff in his abscence was the distinguished Ezra Pound scholar Sister Bernetta Quinn. Other "regulars" holding the fort were Dr. Carl Bennett, Dr. Edna Ann Osmanski-Loftus, and writer-in-residence Ronald H. Bayes. Dr. Bennett's recent publications have been in Joseph Conrad studies, Dr. Osmanski-Loftus is also serving as Core Curriculum director and Professor Bayes became a member of both PEN International and The Academy of American Poets this year.

Foreign Language

Since the founding of St. Andrews, the various programs in the humanities and the fine arts have been an active ingredient in the unique core curriculum of the college. The Foreign Language division, more than any other, has been committed to the task of communication. From translating Plato to conjugating German verbs, this department continues to challenge students both intellectually and aesthetically.

"Will one deny the unity of language? or the use of it, its very source of light? And why can't you constructively arrange the priorities into a coherent, logical system? The system itself would be stable, a point of stablization or stability in the winds of whim wheeling through the races of reunion. A type of tactical planning, or emerging of the impossible into what is possible."

Music

As with the other liberal arts, music has not only been crippled by the continued warfare, but has even ceased entirely in many places. This is evident to everyone, no less than the widespread destruction and disorder which unholy war brings with it.

Heinrich Schutz

Music is indeed an integral part of any liberal arts institution; it provides the opportunity for music majors and non-majors alike to be able to express themselves in unique and exciting ways. The history of music at St. Andrews is a strong one. Our hope is to restore it to a prominent place in the life of our students. "Involvement" is the key, not only of a small coterie of students, but involvement college-wide. Students coming together to participate in and grow through the joy of music.

The diversity of the theatre department has allowed the college to see the talents and work that the students put into the area they love. The students have a chance to explore the aspects of theatre with the individual attention that St. Andrews offers. The program offers students options of designing and contracting an emphasis in some area related to theatre or with a professional emphasis.

People do the strangest things in the Biology program. You might see Dr. Melvin, tall with a huge mustache, with a group of students watching insects pollinate roses; Dr. McCracken, braces and all, extolling the virtues of a transverse rather than cross-cut of the scapel as he demonstrates dissection techniques for his physiologists; Dr. Torres, wire-rimmed and Spanish, is frequently found quietly talking through student's problems; and Dr. Applegate, Greek — capped with windbreaker, talks about parasites with a small group.

The Biologists at St. Andrews, both students and faculty, seem to be interested in a wide variety of living things, but their prime interest is one another and other people.

Biology

The Mathematics, Natural and Health Sciences Division has grown this year with the addition of new faculty members in all four programs; Biology, Chemistry and Physics, Mathematics — Computer Science, and Physical Education. As a direct result of these added resources, there are expanded course offerings in Biology, Mathematics, and Physics. There is even a new 3-2 program in conjunction with the Georgia Institute of Technology for Engineering students. We've added instruments, also. These include a mass spectrometer and a high-speed centrifuge. This combinaton of new people, programs, and instrumentation makes this year one of excitement and new beginnings.

"Let this page be dedicated to the students of the newer generation, who will not wish to reject all inferences from conjecture or surmise, but who will not care to speculate about that which may be surely known. The fascination of a growing life lies at the very borderland of the unknown, but to reach this frontier one must pass over well-traveled roads; of these two of the safest and surest are the broad highways of chemistry and physics."

Physical Education

The Physical Education program includes a major offered in Physical Education, the required activity program, intrmural athletics and intercollegiate athletics. The major in Physical Education has two main avenues: one for those interested in teaching and coaching; and one for those interested in adaptive physical education and working with the physically handicapped. All students are required to take two semesters of Physical Education. One semester teaches physical fitness and the other semester introduces the student to lifetime sports activities. The intramural program offers a variety of activities (tag football, soccer, volleyball, tennis, etc.). The program is student-operated under the supervision of the Physical Education program. St. Andrews believes that participation in athletics should be included in the educational experience offered to its students and has organized its program within sound educational objectives.

Math & Computer Science

Whither mathemantics from the college student? In the seventies, the Mathematics program at St. Andrews began to move to meet one of the challenges cited in "The Challenge of the Eighties," an article appearing in a 1981 issue of the newsletter published by the Mathematical Association of America, the nation's leading organization concerned with undergraduate mathematics. This challenge is that of keeping the training in traditional mathematics vital while expanding the training in such modern applied areas as computing, statistics, and operations research. We haven't arrived, but we are on track. We are flexible.

Larger societies require larger enemies, bringing us in due course to the perilous point of our present situation, where the world's virtually divided into two huge camps. The Business Administration Department is oriented to prepare students for careers in Business Management. The student must understand the activity of the firm, understand the external environment of the firm, gain exposure to important tools in becoming a professional manager, and be able to learn new techniques and concepts in order to become a successful Business major. Economics is enforced in this department also. If one does not want to major in Management, then he may want to major in Economics. This department may one day "rule the world."

Politics

The Politics Department at St. Andrews is a study of needs, of cooperative ways for individuals and groups to fulfill those needs, of accomplishment through caring and through leadership, and of personal fulfillment through interaction with oneself, others and the planet. The student is taught to be a leader, in full command and responsible for his actions. This department is preparing students for law school and graduate school.

History becomes reality with the help of Harvin and Melton. Students have the choice of studying the World Wars, The French Revolution, The American South, or they may choose a Guided Independent Study. Wherever their interests lie, the students have the opportunity to fulfill them with the broad History Department at St. Andrews. Students must have the will and the professors will show the way.

History

The Education Department at St. Andrews "attempts to bridge the gap between the theoretical world and the practical-professional world by providing a number and a variety of field-based experiences." Internships are a positive asset to this department, for students have the opportunity to see a true picture of what it takes to be a teacher.

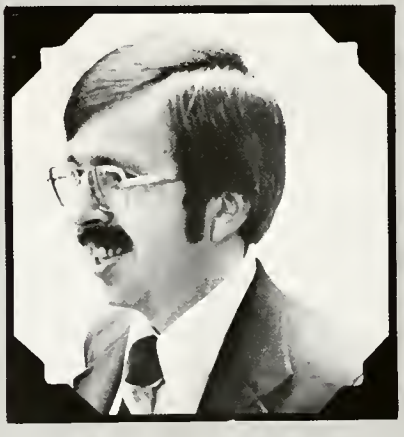
ADMINISTRATION



"Great men have been among us; hands that penned and tongues that uttered wisdom — better none. President/Staff

In this Twentieth Anniversary year, St. Andrews is experiencing the pleasure of looking back, examining its heritage, seeking an understanding of its roots. On this foundation, the College is seeking to construct its plans for the future. As the nation continues to confront the energy crisis, major demographic shifts, continuing economic difficulties and many other problems, the upcoming twenty years do not seem to hold the promise of great stability. One of our most challenging tasks as a college will be working together to plan as best we can for that future and to deal effectively with problems on a current basis. The role of the President is to provide leadership in both current problem-solving and long-range planning, to hold up a vision of excellence that can help sustain us through periods of difficulty. Viewed in that perspective, the role of the President changes very little through the years. It is my hope that each of us will rededicate ourselves to St. Andrews and to the underlying principles upon which the College rests.

Don't try to find Dean Crossley (unless you've made an appointment with his secretary). This man is always on the go. His fast-paced speech made at orientation was no "breach" of character. Ron's sense of humor sizzles. It possibly helps to have a sense of humor in his position. After all, he deals with both administrators and freshmen (he's a SAGE tutor; or is it SAGE Coach?). Joking aside though, here is a man who keeps the college laughing.

The college encourages active student participation in decisions that affect student life . . ." This statement taken from The Bulletin capsules the thinking in the Student Life Offices. Admissions

St. Andrews, what? Remember when you were a junior or senior in high school and your school hosted a College Night? Yea, you know — one of those things your parents drag you to so you can choose a college rather than bummin' around Europe like you'd planned! Bummer man, when you got there, and were walking around talking to all your pals whose parents had the same idea, in the back of the gym, in the darkest corner was this table marked "St. Andrews Presbyterian College." Did you ever wonder who those bums hanging out in the corner were? Well, take a look —

If this office continues to do a good job, St. Andrews will continue to be a top notch college.

DeTamble Library Staff

How has the library changed in twenty years? Try to imagine the library on the ground floor of the LA building, now divided into several art studios but then all one long room. On opening day we had 25,000 volumes from Flora McDonald College and soon added 5,000 more from Presbyterian Junior College. Alumni from those years will remember the day a hot water pipe burst and students and brooms were commandeered to rescue books and to sweep steaming water out the door. In May of 1964 class teams competed for prizes for moving the most books into a spacious new DeTamble building.

Customs change, too. Can you imagine a campus dress code that forbade shorts on the academic side of the lake? A natural corollary was that women library assistants had to wear dresses. Since then, lounge and conference areas have given way to book stacks to accomodate the present 95,000 volumes and dress ranges from bare feet and cut-off jeans to coats, ties, and high heels.

Registers Office

The Registrar's Office stays continuously busy throughout the entire school year, both in the regular terms, and summer terms. The main duty of this office is to register each student correctly. The staff must assist students when they have difficulties with a class, put out grades, and give each student their schedule to assure that the student attends the proper classes. Class registration and gradeprocessing are the busiest times for the staff.

The season itself was a rough one, but the team fought hard. The team was made up of both experienced veterans and recuites.

This year's team has a promising outlook for two reasons: the addition of several experienced recuites and a new coach — Betsy Grahman.

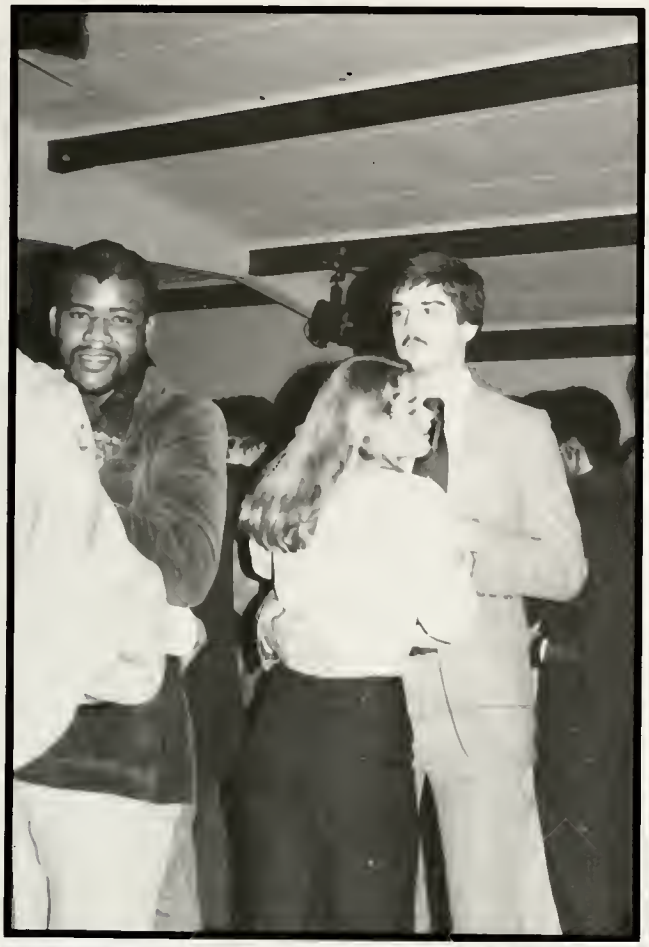
After Twenty Years

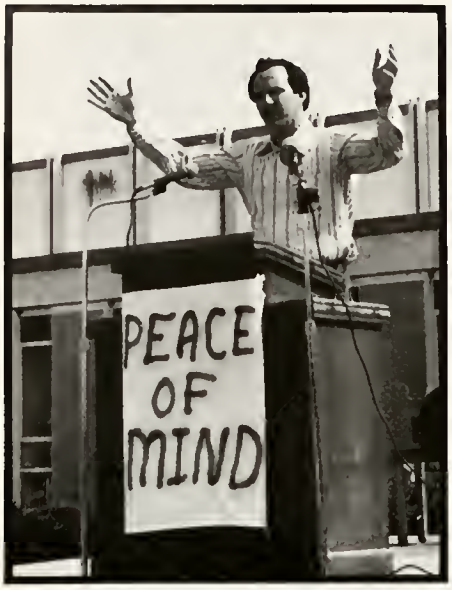
BSU Poetry Reading

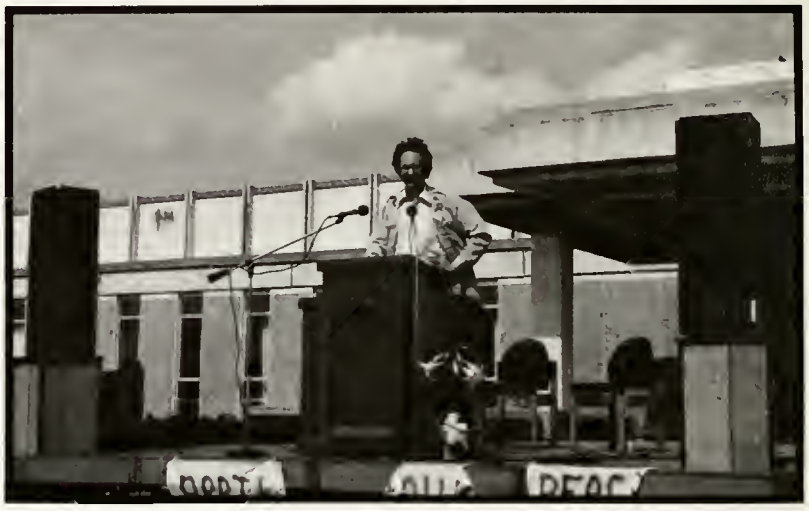
Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Langston Hughes and Nikki Giovanni were just some of the great Black Poets whose works, were read at the annual Black History Month Poetry-Reading in February. Members of the Black Student Union served as readers and sponsors for the event, which was one part of a month long celebration. Various forms of African art, string art and other Black Art Forms served as the setting and backdrop for the setting, and heightened the awarness of the impact Black Art and Litary workers have on American Society today.



Valentines Dance

The Valentines Dance was held in Farrago to celebrate a little fellow by the name of "cupid". It was an evening to be carefree or with the one you love. The CUB sponsered this event which turned out to be a huge success. Farrago was filled with people enjoying the music provided by a "live" band, filling their merriement with muchies and freshments severed by CUB members. Though many people brought their own refreshments to celebrate with also.





Peace Rally

Peacemaking at St. Andrews was a vibrant part in the excellence of activities that were held at St. Andrews this year. The Prophetic Political Committee of the College Christian Council held a peace rally that included many prominent advocats for world peace. Participants included Dr. Frank Covington, former College Pastor of St. Andrews, who officially opened the rally on April 10th. Other participants were Dr. Neal Bushoven, Associate professor of Politics and Mr. Mac Ledgerton, a local Minister as well as the Youth leader of the Americans for Democratic Action.

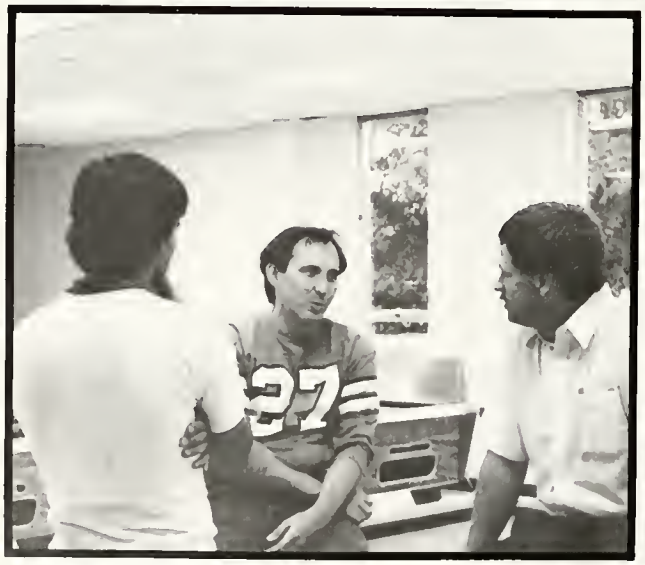
With banners and posters displayed all over the campus and causewalk bearing slogans such as "All we need is love", "Peace", and "Make Love not War" we were forwarned of events to come. Indeed on the day of the rally "peace" music was performed by fellow St. Andrews Students, along with lectures and discussions on issues, such as El Salvador, registration for the peace time draft and Nuclear weaponry. All of which helped in making the rally a success.

Open Mike

Open Mike is a chance for St. Andrews students to do their own thing. Many students have their own special talents and no place to really show them off, except at Open Mike. Most of the students play an instrument, sing, or play in a band. The Mike gives St. Andrews campus a chance to hear talent that is in our own mist.

Mike Cross

Welcome to and evening of humor, folk and a little bit of country and western music. You have just witnessed Mike Cross. Cross a native of Highpoint, North Carolina graces the St. Andrews campus each spring. Along with him he brings a little bit of his country flair, expressed through the use of a "fiddle" and a "guitar". His song "The Bounty Hunter" always brings cheers and dancing from the audience, which results in them yelling for more.



Casino Night

Well not quite the headlines, but in March of 81 a Casino Night was held in the Belk Lounge. The place was turned into a regular Las Vegas. All games were played with monoply money so that no one really lost their shirts or "racked up."

At the end of the evening an auction was held for all to spend their winnings by bidding on prizes provided by local merchants. Everyone had a blast trying their luck out on the tables.

Rummage Sale

Discarded books, worn albums, posters and just plain junk were going for a price at the annual rummage sale. This event which is co-sponsored by Wilmington and Granville dorms, serves as a fund-raiser for Extravaganza-Alumni Weekend. Although there are usually more people lounging in the courtyard, drinking beer and donating items than those that buy. It not only brings in revenue but also provides a chance to get in the last courtyard Saturday afternoon sunning, before the sand for Granville Beach arrives.

Extravaganza Weekend

"Have one on us", as the theme of the annual Extravaganza goes. With a beer truck, keg tosses, boat races, and bands, there is something appealing for every St. Andrews student and friends.

As soon as the pigs begin roasting early Saturday morning, the party begins and ends ... whenever. The party-goers bake in the sun, and do whatever makes their fun, to make each extravaganza a memorable one!

Celebrating 20 Years

On September 22, 1981 St. Andrews College celebrated its twentieth year of existence. The convocation carried the events of honoring the freshman class of 1985, recognizing six outstanding Alumni and marking the event with several keynote speakers. Such speakers were Robert F. Goheen, former U.S. Ambassador to India and President Emeritus of Princeton University. Both men spoke on issues concerning the Liberal Arts education. St. Andrews has gone through twenty years of changes and is heading for many more changes as time passes on ...

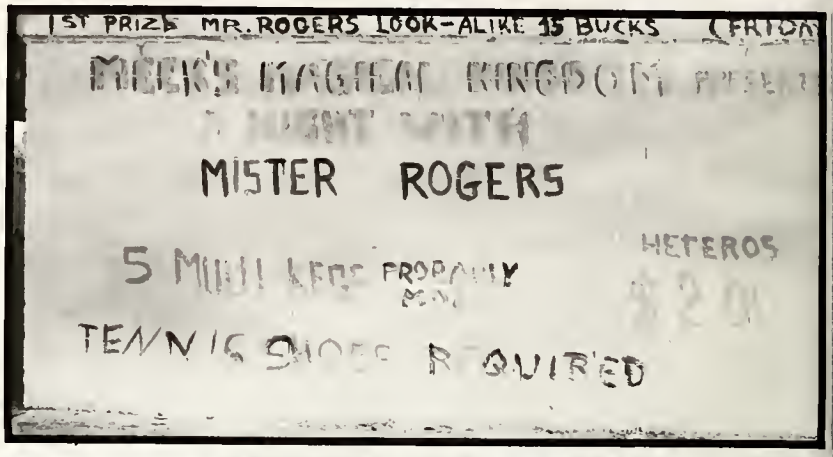
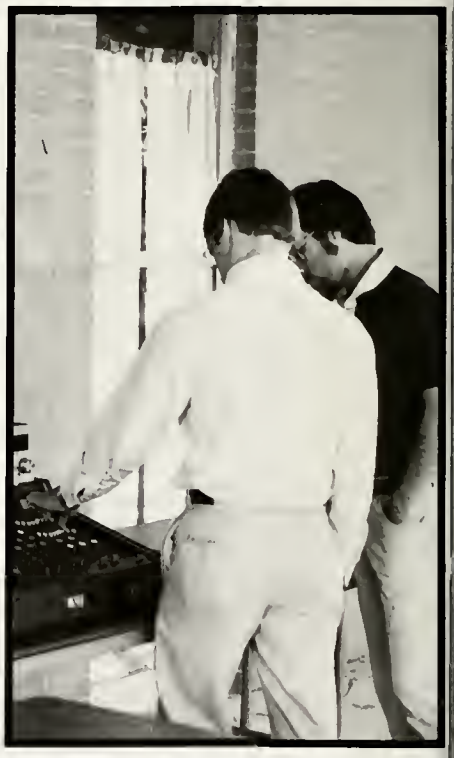
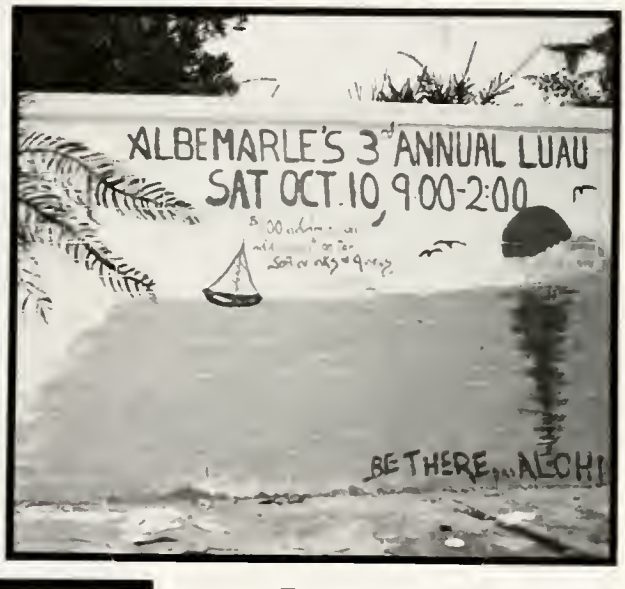
Mr. Rogers

Mecklingburg held the Mister Rogers party on Friday, October 2nd and everyone had to wear clothes to look like Mr. Rogers. A Mr. Rogers costume would consist of a button down sweater, tie, pants and shirt, and last but not least the all famous tennis shoes. The party went over really well, with contest winners, and plenty of refreshments such as, fluids, to clinch your thirst!







Luau

Albarmarle held their 3rd annual luau party again on October 10, 1981 in heir courtyard. The party was a success with dancing and decorations to suite the occasion.

Mr. Fingers & Scorpio

Mr. Fingers & Scorpio held everyones attention when they came to St. Andrews in September. Students watched as they performed hypnotism and telepathy along with magic. Everyone was surprised to see that they could be so easily hypnotised, and made to do such hilarious tasks.

The evening was loads of fun and everyone will be looking forward to Mr. Fingers & Scorpio's next visit to St. Andrews.

Paul Stookey

"Puff the Magic Dragon", "Leaving on a Jet Plane", "Lemon Tree", and "Blowing in the Wind" were just a few of the 1960 Peter, Paul and Mary hits the student body heard as, Noel Paul Stookey and the Bodyworks Band, gave at an evening performance on October twenty-first co-sponsored by the College Christina Council and the College Union Board. Noel-Paul, a born again Christian sang and played to a sold-out audience. The evening was not only magical but a fun one as well. The audience participated by singing, clapping and performing whatever task was asked of them. Performing songs from his Peter, Paul and Mary days which the audience loved and Gospel Music from his latest album, Noel-Paul had an almost hypnotic affect on the audience, as they were both inspired and entertained by Stookey.

Winston-Salem Toga IV

Excitement broke out on campus when Winston-Salem threw a toga IV party on Oct. 23rd. Everyone had to wear a toga, which, added more zest to the occasion. The turn out of students was really good, bringing with them a huge variety of togas.

Halloween

True identities were revealed October 31st, when Granville threw a Halloween party. Most everyone wore a costume, and some of those costumes were definitly in a catagory all by themselves. With music, and refreshments the party went on into the night .. Morning?

Square Dance & Montreat

On November 6th, 7th, and 8th, C.C.U. took an action-packed, fun filled retreat to Montreat, N.C. Those who rode the bus had a great time, running through intersections, due to a lack of brakes.

When everyone did finally get together, we found ourselves in a huge house, with a small fireplace near the front door for heat.

Activities, such as walks in the mountain air, were very inviguarting, and extremely cold. It is not clear as to whether Lookout Mountain will ever be the same after St. Andrews college students scaled its slopes, but at least they had fun doing it. The students and faculty also enjoyed discussion and debates on different topics.

Although the weather was cold, the atmosphere was warm. New friendships were made and everyone learned something about themselves.

Wheelies

Switch places! St. Andrews students did just that. Students wanted to see what it was like to travel day to day in a wheelchair, so for two days the students switched places and became wheelies.

Students had fun, learned alot, and gained a new insight to being a wheelie.

Wheelie Basketball

Students sat in the bleachers as they watched St. Andrews wheelies compete with each other in wheelie basketball. The game was loads of fun to watch as our number one basketball team was defeated by the wheelies with a score of sixty six to fourteen.

Wine And Cheese Party

On Friday November 20th Wilmington dorm held a Wine and Cheese party at Farrago. The party was a total success, with a live band that played music to suite everyone's pleasure. The dance started at 8:00 and everyone danced and enjoyed themselves way on into the night.

1960's Party

On Saturday November 21st, Orange dorm held a Rolling Stones, 1960's party. The music, consisting of The Beatles, The Stones, The Byrds, and The Kinks, was arranged appropriatly, adding vitality to the party.

People dressed up like the 60's and best dressed winners received a case of Budwieser, while 2nd place winners received a 6 pack of beer.

Everyone had a good time with alot of drinking and dancing beginning at 7:00 and ending sometime in the morning.

Christmas Dance

On December 5th Concord Dorm held their annual Christmas dance at the Country Club of North Carolina in Pinehurst.

The dance brought in a good number of students along with alumni and faculty members. The Country Club also provided a dinner for the St. Andrews students to attend before the dance.

So, the band played on . . . while everyone danced and throughly enjoyed themselves.

Christmas Service

Carols echoed around campus when St. Andrews had the tree lighting service to round off the year on December 7th.
The Christmas spirit could be seen on everyones face as they sang and shared their feelings of Christmas.
There were a good number of students at the service, then all the students retired to their dorms to commence studying for final exams.

Buried Child

The Highland Players started spring term 81 with the drama "Buried Child." The play itself was one that held the audience in silence watching every move. "Buried Child" delt with a sick father, a religious mother, one son that was "slow", one son that left the town for a better life, and a past that haunted them all. "Buried Child" had the talents of George Anderson, Lynn Allen, Bob Harwood, Jennie Wilhelm, David Kennedy, Connie Bowes, and Clint Werner.

"A Thousand Clowns" was the second production that spring. Filled with laughter, zanyness, and love; "A Thousand Clowns" was an opposite to "Buried Child." A story of an out of work writer, his son, the social worker who falls for him, and "Mr. Chipmunk" (the t.v. host who needs the writer to come back to work for him.) George Anderson and Connie Bowes show their versility again. Along with some new faces of Brew Washington, Robert King, Harvey Jorden, and David Vest.

A Thousand Clowns

Equus

Equus was put on by the Highland Players on October 23-25. The play is written by Peter Shaffer and was directed by Dr. McDonald. The story is of a 17-year-old boy whose mental state leads him to blind six horses with a steel spike. A psychiatrist tries to bring on a confrontation between the boy's world and the distorted world he now lives in. Everyone's talent from the cast caught the audience in a silent, but watchful state. The main body of characters were Billy Murray, Connie Bowes, Sue Calkins, Andrew Montgomery, Gail Hutchison, and Ellen Anzalone.

The Glass Menagerie was performed on November 20-22 under the direction of William Peterson. The play was originally written by Tennessee Williams. It is about a young girl who is very shy and retreats to her world of glass animals. The whole family lives in the past in one way or another to find that their lives end in an illusion. The cast consisted of: Sue Calkins, Ruth Carter, Clint Werner, and Carl McIntyre.

WHO!

The Lamp and Shield has made it through another year. The year of 1981-82 was the time to celebrate St. Andrews' twenty years of existence and reflect on the past. Many changes have gone on and some of these changes have been shown in the yearbook to the staff's best ability. Some of the changes are in the new model classrooms, new offices, and remodeling of buildings or dorms. Even staff members and professors are either new or in different places. Remembering always hearing in September, "Where's Dr. McDonald now?" and "Professor Who?" Therefore, we the Lamp and Shield staff hopes that all the new people on campus has had a good year and we are glad you are with us.

Running a yearbook is alot of time and work and it can not be done without the aid of many people. I would like to thank these people for all their efforts.

Gary D'Andrea, for all the class pictures.
The College Relations office, especially Libby Turner and Jan Golden for pictures when we got stuck.
All the professors and offices for their cooperation with the yearbook staff.
Ron Bayes and Dean Claytor for all the advise and overseeing of the yearbook.
My roommate and friends for putting up and standing by me through it all.
Mike Griffen, our Josten's representative, who has worked with us to help get the book out.
And last, but the most important, my staff. For without them and all their hard work, St. Andrews would not have a 1981-82 yearbook.

So as my senior year and my job as Editor ends, so does all the good and bad times. Though the memories will live on forever.

For now I give to you the 1981-1982 Lamp and Shield yearbook as a remembrance of this year.
